Battleground strengthens Operational Risk capability

Battleground, the leading Business Continuity Management (BCM) and Crisis Management consultancy and software provider have strengthened their Operational Risk capability with the addition of Joe McDavitt, a seasoned operational risk business leader and consultant, to their team.

McDavitt, who has recently been supporting a range of APRA regulated institutions in preparation for the new Operational Risk Management standard, CPS 230, and before that had worked with a range of banks, super funds and other organisations to improve risk management, controls and risk insight, joins Battleground to lead their Operational Risk Capability, and, in particular to support clients connect the dots between resilience and operational risk management.

“CPS 230 sets a new benchmark for operational risk management in Australia. All organisations, large and small, have significant work to do to meet this standard in a sustainable manner. Battleground offers a data-enabled approach to meeting these requirements that organisations need, but traditional approaches and solutions cannot meet.” Joe McDavitt | Director Operational Risk

Battleground CEO and co-founder, Craig Goldberg, said “I have known Joe for more than a dozen years, and through that time he has always been a highly innovative thinker in the operational risk space, I’m elated he can join the team at Battleground to support our existing clients and our growth ambitions.”

Battleground has been in business for more than ten years, has run more than 300 crisis simulations and supports more than 30 active clients.
